The man was too scared to utter a word, but as the Regent was calling for a sword with which to confer the honor the Marquis of Anglesey, the Regent's host, pointed out that his solicitor, John Fowler, was a worthy recipient of the honor. The Regent was, after some demur, persuaded to alter his hasty decision; and the sweep was only too pleased to get away, and Sir John Fowler worked a comfortable practice for many years, which still continues.-London stail.

Facts About Germany.

Germany's best schools are her public ones. Poor boy and prince alike attend the e schools. Thus there are not two dialects-the vulgar and the aristocratic, as in England and France-but all Germans speak alike, and the language, both written and spoker, is kept pure.

Berlin's sewage is used to fertilize the city's huge sewage farm-a farm thirty square miles in extent. The German Engeror's cigars are seven inches long and come from Havana to him in giass tubes hermetically sealed. A Berlin man breads rats for surgical experimental work. Germany's proportion of suicides is the largest in the world.-Chicago
